The coal measures of Missouri occupy the northwestern half of the State and underlie approximately 23,000 square miles, of which 14,000 are considered to be probably productive territory. The beds belong to the Pennsylvania series of the Carboniferous and, as in Iowa, include two well-marked divisions, a lower and an upper. The lower or productive portion occupies a belt along the eastern edge of the field, and mining is confined entirely to this area. The formation consists largely of shalus and sandstones, with a few thin limestones in the upper part. The coal beds are from 4 to 6 feet thick in most situations, but are patchy in distribution. The coal is of a dry, noncoking bituminous grade. Near the edge of the field are several outliers of very thick coal, occupying erosion depressions in the underlying limestones. These have small economic importance, but have created a great deal of interest and have led to the loss of considerable money in exploration. The total thickness of the coal measures is estimated at 2,000 feet and increases from the outcrop to the...
